

Utopia Festival Will Screen Diverse Films, Oct 14 & 15

by Susan Gervasi

Greenbelt's Utopia Film Festival 2017 is scheduled for the weekend of October 14 and 15 at the Greenbelt Arts Center and Old Greenbelt Theatre, with an array of independent documentaries, features, short films and animation from across the nation and around the world.

"In this tense social and political climate, when divisiveness is defiantly paraded above camaraderie, I am proud that Utopia once again presents a slate of films united in their goals to entertain, enlighten and touch," said Utopia Executive Director Chris Haley. The film festival, now in its 13th year, is a non-profit project of Greenbelt Access Television.

For this year's event, Utopia volunteers reviewed hundreds of entries and chose 40 of the best independent cinematic works that reflect the diversity of the human experience and emotion. Offerings range from the light-hearted Filling In, about an unlikely candidate for an unlikely job, to The Writer with No Hands, the disturbing true story of a vanished screenwriter and the British filmmaker searching for answers to his disappearance.

Other Utopia films focus on social change, the environment and World War II.

An American House explores Annunciation House, which opens its doors to immigrants, refugees and others who have entered the U.S. illegally and helps prepare them for what they will confront beyond its doors.

Left on Pearl documents the 1971 feminist takeover and occupation of a Harvard University building. At the time, among other inequities, job ads were segregated by gender, women's shelters did not exist and married women could not open bank accounts without their husbands' permission. The filmmaker is expected for a Q & A session.

Other Utopia films that address social change include Union Leader, about a young family man who confronts problems at the notoriously shoddy chemical

Important Changes Proposed To WMATA Bus Routes Here

by Carolina Velloso

The Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) is proposing several changes to Metrobus routes, including to the B30, G12 and G14 lines that service Greenbelt. WMATA's proposal calls for two major changes to the G12 and G14 bus routes, which were discussed at the Greenbelt City Council meeting on September 11 with WMATA representative Albert Himes.

Per the proposal, the timed transfers at Roosevelt Center would be eliminated. Untimed transfers would still be available. The changes would result in a 15 to 30 minute wait at the Roosevelt Center for transfer between the two routes.

Additionally, arrival and departure times between Greenbelt and New Carrollton Metro stations would be staggered. The WMATA proposal states that spacing departure times evenly would increase frequency on stops along the routes from every 30 and 60 minutes to every 15 and 30 minutes. It would also improve service and reduce congestion at New Carrollton station, per the proposal.

At the council meeting, Mayor Emmett Jordan praised the shorter wait times, but opined that buses should continue stopping and waiting at the Roosevelt Center on the untimed transfers under the staggered system, even if for fewer minutes.

The proposed change to B30, the Greenbelt-BWI Express Line, would add Arundel Mills Mall as a stop to the route. The new route would increase time between buses from every 60 to every 70 minutes during weekday rush hours.

WMATA's proposal cites expansion into new markets and increased ridership as a reason for the change.

A second option for the B30 route would be to add service along Baltimore Avenue (U.S. 1) between Sunnyside Avenue in Beltsville and Fort Meade Road (MD 198) in addition to Arundel Mills Mall. This option would increase time between buses from every 60 to every 90 minutes during weekday rush hours.

At the meeting, councilmembers expressed interest in adding Arundel Mills Mall to the route, but were more hesitant about the large increase in wait times that would result by adding U.S. 1 to the route.

Stewart, Davis and Celdran Offer Their Biographies

Thirteen candidates have now been certified for the Greenbelt City Council by City Clerk Bonita Anderson. The biographies are prepared by the candidates and are published in the order in which we receive them. The biography for Danielle Celdran is on page 8.

Susan Stewart

Susan was born in Washington, D.C. in 1975 and raised in Maryland. Her parents met across the world from here during the Vietnam War. Her mother is from South Vietnam and her father is a veteran retired Sergeant First Class of the U.S. Army from Talladega, Alabama. As a middle child, she grew up in the Wheaton/Silver Spring area near Sligo Creek Park, where her parents still live.

Susan graduated second in her class at Albert Einstein HS in Kensington. She holds a Bachelor of Music degree in violin performance with a minor in mathematics from James Madison University and received a Master of Music degree in violin performance from the University of Notre Dame on full scholarship. In addition to performing, she taught many students, from ages 3 to 70. After moving to Ohio as her husband pursued his law degree, in 2006 the couple and their son moved to Greenbelt.

As a stay-at-home mother, Susan worked as a community activist, focusing on progressive and environmental issues. She attended leadership training and conferences, lobbied our county, state and U.S. Congress, and volunteered with many groups, including the Chesapeake Climate Action Network, the Maryland Sierra Club, Progressive Majority, Wellstone Action, Peace & Justice coalition, Powershift, Our Revolution and Progressive MD. Over the years, she contributed her time as a citizen activist on issues such as civil marriage, LGBT equality, ending poverty, preventing climate change, healthcare reform, advocating for peace, ending corruption and protecting the environment.

Judith F. "J" Davis

Judith F. "J" Davis is in her twelfth term on Council. Currently serving as Mayor Pro Tem, J formerly was Mayor for 16 years, Greenbelt's longest continuously serving Mayor. Prior to her election to Council in 1993, she was appointed to the City's Advisory Planning Board for ten years and was elected Chair by its members for four years. Davis represents Greenbelt on the Anacostia Trails Heritage Area Governing Board. Recently, J was appointed to the Central Maryland Transportation and Mobility Commission.

After moving to Greenbelt in 1975, J soon became active in local affairs. A Greenbriar condominium owner, she was elected to its Phase I Board of Directors for 14 years. She was Carnival Chair for the Labor Day Festival Committee for 18 years. In 1995, J was on the Project Design Committee for GIVES, the Greenbelt Intergenerational Volunteer Exchange Service, and became a charter member and officer.

Davis has honed her leadership skills and expanded her experience and effectiveness by serving tirelessly in many roles. As Mayor, J was the Council's representative to the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG) Board of Directors. In 2005, she was elected Chair of the COG Board and, in 2010, was its corporate President. Davis is a member of COG's Chesapeake Bay and Water Resources Policy Committee, which she has served on since its inception. Davis is a member of the Energy, Environment, and Natural Resources Policy Committee for the National League of Cities, having first been appointed in 2005. Due to her focus on environmental issues, J has brought back innovative ideas and best practices to be incorporated by the City. To ensure that Greenbelt remains aware of what is going on in Annapolis, J has

Election 2017

Once More We Quiz
The Candidates

The News Review once again asks candidates for election to the Greenbelt City Council to respond to questions posed by this newspaper. This year we ask four questions. Answers to the questions will be published during October with the first question's answers published October 5 and the remainder in subsequent weeks. Candidates are required to submit their answers to the News Review offices before 8 p.m. on the Monday preceding the question's publication date, preferably by email to editor@greenbeltnewsreview.com. Answers will be limited to 300 words. If an answer exceeds the limit, the answer will be cut off at that point.

Question 1. What would you like council to accomplish in the next term?

Question 2. What ideas would you put forward or support to increase the connectivity of Greenbelt East, Center and West?

Question 3. With the FBI headquarters now off the table for Greenbelt, what would you like to see done with the proposed development site?

Question 4. How would you balance the benefits of green actions against their cost?

Voter Registration for City
Election Closes October 10

by Kathleen Gallagher

Have you been procrastinating? It is too late to decide to run for city council. It's too late to sign a candidate's petition. But there is still time to register to vote in the November 7 Greenbelt election. If you haven't done it, just do it!

Being registered to vote in a Greenbelt election means being age 18 or older by election day and being registered to vote in Prince George's County at a residence address that lies within the boundaries of the City of Greenbelt.

The deadline for registering or for correcting registration information for purposes of the city election is Tuesday, October 10. Forms and corrections must be received by the Prince George's County Board of Elections in Largo by 4:30 p.m. Be aware that Monday, October 9 is a federal holiday. Post offices and county offices will be closed.

Voters can check to see if their registration information is correct on the website of the State Board of Elections at elections.state.md.us. From the home page, click on Voter Services under the heading Hot Topics. One's personal information should be correct at this location, but the polling places identified will not be correct for city elections. The voting machines described on the state's website are not used in city elections either.

Anyone with a Maryland driver's license or Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration (MVA) identification card can register to vote or make corrections to registration information online at the State Board of Elections website.

For those who prefer paper, forms can be printed from the state website and returned by postal mail. No computer? No problem. Residents can pick up forms at the Greenbelt library, from the city clerk's office or from the county Board of Elections.

If time does not permit mailing forms in time to be received by the deadline, registration or changes may be accomplished in person at the county Board of Elections office at 1100 Mercantile Lane, Suite 115A, in Largo or at any full-service MVA office during regular hours.

Questions about registration should be directed to the county Board of Elections office at 301-341-7300 or to the city clerk's office at 301-474-8000. Additional information on the city election can be found on the city website at greenbeltnmd.gov.

Correction

In last week's issue a statement we made was open to misinterpretation. In our story on Page 1, Council Adds Voting Age, Maybe Dam Loan to Ballot, in the continuation on Page 7 we made reference to Rick Ransom's request to add the Greenbelt Pledge to the city website. The Community Relations Board created the pledge in response to a planned Ku Klux Klan march that was to have occurred in 1997. There is no such march proposed now.

New Films at Theater

Two new films are coming to Old Greenbelt Theatre this Friday, September 29: California Typewriter and Polina (Polina, danser sa vie).

California Typewriter, directed by Doug Nichol, is a documentary about artists, writers and collectors who continue to use the typewriter despite living in a society that embraces speed and convenience in an increasingly digital age. In the film, Tom Hanks, John Mayor, David McCullough, Sam Shepard and others explore and offer intriguing insight into humans' ever evolving relationship with machines as well as technology, both old and new. The film also follows the struggles faced by California Typewriter, one of America's last typewriter repair shops.

Running Time: 1 hour, 43 minutes.

The film Polina, directed by Valerie Muller and Angelin Preljocaj, is a drama that follows the life of a talented young dancer. Polina, played by the professional dancer Anastasia Shevtsova who has danced with Saint Petersburg's Mariinsky Theatre, has grown up with the strict and demanding lifestyle of a classical ballet dancer. The film follows Polina as she gives up the opportunity to join the Bolshoi Ballet, along with everything she is familiar with, to move to France in order to pursue contemporary dance. Upon her arrival, Polina learns quickly how challenging it is to succeed despite her dedication and hard work.

Solar Homes Shine Saturday, October 7

Drive, walk or cycle through Greenbelt and notice numerous homes with roofs full of solar panels. Maybe one is just curious to know more about them. Maybe one is seriously interested in having them installed on a house but are confused by the various purchasing options. Buy? Lease? Or maybe go with the little or no down payment option and pay a fixed price per kilowatt-hour to the installer for the amount of electricity the solar panels produce each month. To learn more, mark the calendar for the weekend of October 7 to 8 when solar homeowners across the Washington, D.C., region and the nation will be opening up homes to show their systems and answer questions.

Greenbelt will be represented by six homes, the largest concentration in the area. And not just solar energy will be highlighted. Half the Greenbelt homes will showcase plug-in hybrid and all-battery electric cars and home charging systems. Plus, a myriad of energy-conserving and water-conserving products will be a part of this green building tour. All six Greenbelt homes will be open on Saturday, October 7 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Visit the Tour of Solar and Green Homes website for details: solartour.org/homes.html.

An electronic tour guide can be downloaded for free or a printed copy may be purchased for a modest fee.

Collins was a firefighter for the District of Columbia, Engine 22, for the past 13 years, but started as a volunteer for the Greenbelt and Laurel fire departments in the 1990s.

Collins graduated from Frederick Douglass High School in Upper Marlboro, where he lettered in baseball for three years as the starting catcher and for two years as starting tackle on the Prince George’s County AA Champion football team. Several other Utopia films focus on WWII. Forgive Don’t Forget documents an American filmmaker’s journey to Japan to personally return a Japanese soldier’s sword confiscated during Japan’s 1945 surrender. Angels of the Sky features interviews with WWII pilots from the 8th Air Force who were shot down over German territory and captured as POWs. And another perspective on WWII is explored in An Undeniable Voice, an interview by actress Sharon Stone with Sam Harris, believed to be one of the youngest Holocaust survivors.

On the environmental front, Streams of Plastic documents how Central Americans and Southeast Asians are working to stop the flow of plastic pollution damaging their reefs and coastlines. BURNED: Are Trees the New Coal? probes the policy loopholes and huge subsidies enjoyed by the power industry as our forests are destroyed. And the short film True Colors investigates the world of cotton production, its use of toxic dyes

Utopia documentaries also include Paint as You Like, about a son’s emotional journey through his father’s life as an artist (filmmaker expected for Q & A) and The End of the Road, which profiles a group of Vietnam War resisters, free-spirited Canadians and nonconformist Europeans who have settled in Lund, Canada.

“Every year I am freshly encouraged by the plurality of artistic souls who have endeavored to address the social issues of our times ... and ultimately say, ‘No, inequality is not okay. Injustice is not just the way it’s always been and always will be,’” added Utopia director Haley, an actor who directs research into slavery in Maryland for the Maryland State Archives and is a nephew of Roots author Alex Haley. “Yes, we can and should strive for something better. I’m proud that Utopia annually tries to share that vision.”

Utopia will also present a free screening of animation works by students of George “Mr. Geo” Kochell, who teaches computer animation for the Greenbelt Association for Visual Arts and Greenbelt Access Television, the primary Utopia sponsor.

Schedule and venue information will be included in the next two issues of the News Review, and can also be found on the Utopia website: utopiafilmfestival.org. WSSC Announces Change In Average Water Usage

by Amy S. Hansen

Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC) quietly implemented a major change in their last quarterly bills. No, it is not a difference in the amount owed. That is up to the individual. Rather, it is a shift in how much is collectively used.

WSSC consumers are, on average, using less water than they used to. Starting with bills issued after July 1, 2017, the water company is reporting that each consumer uses an average of 55 gallons a day, rather than the 70 gallons that was on earlier bills.

In short, conservation is working.

WSSC serves 432,720 residential accounts in Prince George’s and Montgomery counties for 1.8 million people. There are 25,706 commercial and government accounts, but those don’t figure into this average.

In the last several years, customers (and their builders) have installed low-flow toilets and water-saving showerheads. This is probably the reason for the 15 gallon-per-day change, said WSSC spokesperson Lyn Riggins.

“This was not something that changed overnight; however, we had to pick a time to change that information on the bill and that was July 1,” said Riggins.

Water is amorphous. It flows. It splashes. It seeps away. Without putting a pitcher below the faucet, it is difficult for many of us to understand how much we use.

“Think about a gallon of milk,” suggested Riggins. “Then ask do I need to use 55 of these a day?” While many people don’t think about it, enough have so that the water consumption per person is down by 15 times 1.8 million or 27 million gallons per day.

Riggins said that WSSC is pleased with the conservation and hopes it will continue. But she noted: “This is a double-edged sword for us. We want people to use water. That’s our revenue. But we want them to use it wisely.”

Greenbelt’s Sustainability Coordinator Luisa Robles said she is also pleased to hear about the change in the average. “Unfortunately, we have no way of knowing how much our city uses,” she said. But she does see conservation efforts, such as residents purchasing rain barrels to collect rain water for gardens.

Riggins said WSSC is working at restructuring their rates and is trying to find ways to emphasize both conservation practices and the affordability part of water usage that everyone pays attention to: the bill.

Lucky Is as Lucky Does! 13 Candidates for Council

by Kathleen Gallagher

At this time two years ago, this paper described the group of 11 candidates for seven city council seats as “a bumper crop.” Little did we know!

This year, 13 candidates are vying for the seven seats: six incumbents and seven challengers. Whether 13 proves to be a lucky or unlucky number – and for whom – will be unknown until election night on November 7. Until then, we know Greenbelt is lucky to have 13 residents willing to present themselves and put the time and effort into running a campaign.

The incumbents running for new terms are Judith Davis, Emmett Jordan, Leta Mach, Silke Pope, Edward Putens and Rodney Roberts. Davis, Jordan and Putens reside in Greenbelt East. Mach, Pope and Roberts live in center city. The seventh current councilmember, Konrad Herling, is stepping down this year, with his vacant seat undoubtedly upping the candidate pool.

Challengers who have run for office previously include George Boyce, William Orleans and Susan Stewart, all three of whom are residents of center city.

Newcomers to the fray include Colin Byrd, Danielle (“Li’l Dan”) Celdran, Ric Gordon and Aaron Marcavitch. Byrd lives in Greenbelt East. Celdran and Marcavitch live in center city.

Gordon lives in Greenbelt West.

On September 25, the certified candidates assembled prior to the evening’s city council meeting to draw for positions on the ballot, as well as for positions for campaign signs to be placed on city property. Results for the campaign signs are best viewed in person, so keep an eye out for sign poles that are coming soon to a corner near you!

City Clerk Bonita Anderson had cards at the ready and candidates drew for their assigned places. Silke Pope’s luck was running high since she drew first place for both ballot and sign placement. While there is considerable debate about the advantages and disadvantages of where one’s name is on a ballot, few would argue that there is any disadvantage to being at the top of the ballot.

The names of the other candidates will follow Pope’s (#1) on the ballot in the following order: Byrd (#2), Boyce (#3), Orleans (#4), Mach (#5), Roberts (#6), Davis (#7), Marcavitch (#8), Putens (#9), Celdran (#10), Jordan (#11), Gordon (#12) and Stewart (#13).

Monday’s Lockdown at Local Schools Stands Down Quickly

by Lesley Kash
A brief lockdown of all three Greenbelt West school campuses took place Monday, September 25 in response to the reported sighting of a person with a gun. The situation was resolved quickly by police and school administrators. Shortly before 11 a.m. in the parking area of the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, a city employee reported seeing a person with what appeared to be a handgun, according to George Mathews, Greenbelt Police Department public information officer. Police contacted Springhill Lake Elementary, the school nearest to the location, and the school was locked down promptly. Police officers conducted a search of the area, no threat was found and the lockdown was lifted after approximately 15 minutes. Greenbelt Middle School and the Dora Kennedy French Immersion School were also put on lockdown due to proactive communication among the school resource officers at each of the three campuses. According to an assistant vice principal at Springhill Lake Elementary, the lockdown was uneventful, with all students and staff remaining “safe and secure.”

Partnership Aims to Boost Volunteerism at Theater

by Matthew Arbach

The Center for Dynamic Community Governance (CDCG) and the Old Greenbelt Theatre (OGT) kicked off their year-long partnership on Tuesday, September 12. Carol Shaw of the Greenbelt Community Foundation presented a $4,777 check to CDCG founders Aileen Kroll and John Buck at a ceremony attended by members of the public and the city council.

The focus of this partnership is on volunteerism. The OGT relies on volunteers to perform duties such as concessions, outreach and publicity/marketing. They are part of a three-tier structure that includes a board, staff and volunteers. The CDCG looks to enhance and strengthen the volunteer component using their precepts which center on consensual decision-making, transparency and open communication.

The CDCG seeks to revitalize the volunteer system at OGT as efficiently and harmoniously as possible this year, says CDCG member Aileen Kroll. The goal is to enhance organization and open up the channels of communication, where everyone is valued and maximum benefit for all is achieved. She wants to ensure that OGT volunteers are a diverse group, a factor which they hope to increase by reaching out to local universities, places of worship and community organizations. A volunteer coordinator position may be created. Ultimately, a model of board, staff and volunteers will be created that can be replicated elsewhere in Greenbelt and beyond.

Cathy Jones, board chair of the Friends of Greenbelt Theatre (FGT), hopes to implement a good structure that will be ongoing. The partnership came out of the use of CDCG approaches in their monthly meetings. Since receiving their contract from the City of Greenbelt in spring 2015, the nine-member FGT board acts as a steering committee to manage the operations of the theater as a community based non-profit. The process of change will occur through connecting with the community and all those involved with the OGT, to ascertain their needs, concerns and ideas for making the system better. Questionnaires will also be used.

The OGT, built in 1938, is “an astonishing resource,” says Kroll. It provides reasonable ticket prices, frequent speakers on relevant topics and many free showings, as well as hosting many events open to the public. Most of the concessions sold are from local vendors. Volunteers are allowed free viewings of films.

Rec. Department and Local Businesses Host Bike Rodeo

by Brooks DuBose

Officer Carlos Torres of Greenbelt police department instructs children in the obstacle course at the Greenbelt Recreation Department Bike Rodeo at Beltway Plaza on September 23.

Children from across the area rolled into the Beltway Plaza parking lot on their bicycles on the morning of Saturday, September 23, to take part in the Bike Rodeo hosted by the Greenbelt Recreation Department. The event was organized by Recreation Coordinator Alison Longworth in conjunction with several area businesses and the Greenbelt Police Department.

“The Bike Rodeo is designed to help children who already know how to ride, bike safely in their neighborhoods,” Longworth said.

Kids lined up to be fitted for free helmets donated by Paradyme Management. If they brought their bikes, they could get them checked for free by Laurie Lemieux, the co-owner of Proteus Bicycles in College Park.

Throughout the two-hour event, instructors helped children ages 5 to 12 to improve their riding skills, assisted by volunteers and experts from the Washington Area Bicyclist Association (WABA). Riders were taught “stopping, starting, basic road rules and how to handle and avoid obstacles,” said Longworth.

A course was set up with stop signs, turns and obstacles. The course helped provide a safe space for children to practice scenarios they might encounter while riding in the area, said Recreation Supervisor Anne Oudamans.

Jeff Wetzel, the youth and family education coordinator at WABA, coached kids on the course to stop every time they come to a stop sign and to look both ways. Wetzel said he hoped that events like the Bike Rodeo would spur more bicycle education in area schools.

Bill Davis, a resident of Greenbelt, brought his granddaughter to the event to help her improve her riding. Davis said he was glad the event was held at Beltway Plaza this year instead of at Springhill Lake Recreation Center. “This location is better. There’s more space. More people can attend,” Davis said.

“Local businesses, police and the recreation department are working together to make it a little easier for kids to be comfortable on their bike,” said Mayor Emmett Jordan. “Greenbelt was designed to be walkable and bikeable” and events like this “make sure kids stay safe,” Jordan said.

A DJ played upbeat family-friendly music throughout the event. Songs like Happy by Pharrell Williams added to the fun atmosphere. “We’re all about learning through play,” said Oudamans. Free food, water and coffee were provided to attendees by the recreation department.

“We’re really excited to be helping with this event. We feel like we are part of the fabric of the community,” Lemieux said. She stressed the importance of local businesses like Proteus participating in events like the Bike Rodeo. “If we can’t serve the community and get people to ride bikes and have fun on them, then we’re not fulfilling our mission to really make people happy on their bicycles.”

Greenbelt Police officers helped residents register their bikes, which can be useful if a bike is stolen. “If you register your bike with the city or county, when a stolen bike is recovered it is easier to be returned to its owner,” said Longworth. Many of the event volunteers were from the Greenbelt Police Explorer Program.

Proteus Bicycles provided front and rear taillights and locks to give out to children in attendance. Nearly 100 helmets were contributed by Paradyme Management as well as three bikes that were raffled off at the event. “This will be the first time [children] have been outfitted with what they need to bike safely,” Oudamans said.

“We are excited to host this event. We hope to have more bike rodeos if people didn’t make it out to this one,” Longworth said.

Local Teen’s Film to Screen In International Festival

by Ingrid Cowan Hass

In the Garden, an original animated short film created by Greenbelt resident Alexandra Nickel, will screen during the Ninth Annual Tofuzi International Animation Festival held in Batumi, Republic of Georgia, October 2 to 7.

Her film is one of 10 accepted in the category films created by children and is the single U.S. film in the category.

Nickel, age 13, completed her film over 12 weeks in GAVA/GATe’s animation class fall homeschool session using Adobe Flash and Final Cut Pro software. Tofuzi’s acceptance marks the first time a GAVA/GATe youth film has screened in Europe.

In the Garden will also screen at the Old Greenbelt Theatre on Saturday, October 14 between 11 a.m. and noon as part of a free program featuring films by young people during this year’s Utopia Film Festival. The short films, lasting an average of 1 to 2 minutes each, are made by students who create and draw characters
